In appreciation for your selfless work and dedication during these extraordinary times

Thriving in the time of coronavirus

“During an on-line meditation, the woman leading the session used the term, ‘caring space’ instead of ‘social distancing.’ I really like that because it feels less fear-based and more heart-centered.”

—Kathleen Miller, clinical documentation specialist, Case Management

“I was speaking with Dee Dee Suslak, nursing director of Infection Control. When she started her first role in Infection Control, her manager told her, ‘You’ve been working in an ICU, you’re going to be so bored here.’ Definitely not the case!”

—Ann Marie Dwyer, RN, director, PCS Informatics

Nursing director, Michelle Anastasi's mother, made Elvis masks for staff of the Ellison 19 Thoracic/Vascular Unit. Elvis is in the building!

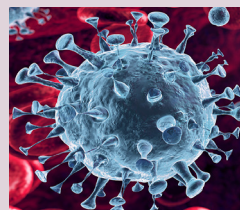

PT aides clean ID badges, Voalte phones, personal phones, and common areas to preserve PPE and keep the area COVID-free.

Staff of the Blake 8 Cardiac Surgical ICU are keeping their spirits up by virtually bringing their pets to work.
